Expected outcome:

Ganesha Chaturthi is celebrated with extreme vigour and enthusiasm especially in western India, specifically in Maharashtra. The celebration of Ganesha Chaturthi is considered as a community event and was restarted by Lokmanya Tilak, a freedom fighter, who made use of this as a tool to spread the message and gather public support uniting all sections of Hindus. Ganpati is connected to the natural cycle. When we bring this small mud idol home, we offer it all our love and devotion. This idol which collects our positive thoughts and energies is then returned to the earth, either through the rivers or even at home, it carries our goodwill to others and to our environment. We then are united through the earth, the waters and through our goodwill. We need to bring this awareness back into the way we perform our rituals.
